Home appliances and fuel systems need regular check-ups to keep them running properly, just as automobiles do.

Safeguarding You and Your Propane System

That is why the National Propane Gas Association (NPGA) developed the Gas Appliance System Check (GAS Check®) program. This national safety program was designed to reduce the chances of residential accidents involving propane gas. A GAS Check® inspection allows service personnel to explain in everyday terms the safety features of gas appliances. The service technician checks the entire propane system for leaks, familiarizes homeowners with the distinctive smell of propane and provides other important safety information.

If there is any worn or damaged equipment that should be replaced, the consumer is informed and advised of the options for correcting the problem or improving the system.
